FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Second Annual John Mandel Distinguished Service Award Winner

(Atlanta, GA, August 30, 2011)

Monday, August 29, 2011, Project Time & Cost, Inc. (PT&C) honored its commitment to long-held corporate values with the presentation of the second annual John Mandel Distinguished Service Award. Given in memory of the personal and professional life lived by John Mandel, the Award was presented in a companywide ceremony to Senior Consultant Robert (Bob) Haskell by senior executive and President of PT&C Forensic Consulting Services division, Grover Davis.

Bob, a part of PT&C since 2010, has a distinguished professional history, earning the respect and admiration of employers, clients, and colleagues. A current resident of Ellensburg, WA, Bob has a B.S. in Civil Engineering from the University of Massachusetts. Bob was presented with a personalized trophy, a financial award, and his name inscribed on a plaque honoring John Mandel that hangs in PT&C's headquarters in Atlanta, GA. In his remarks, Bob read excerpts of comments his son, Todd Haskell, wrote congratulating his dad on this recognition. "I am very proud of you. I was especially pleased when I read the qualities that the recipient is supposed to embody, as they focused on being a good person as well as being a good employee. I know you have always had high standards for yourself in that regard, and it's nice to see your co-workers and the company recognize that."

John Mandel worked for PT&C from 2006 until his passing in 2010 and made immeasurably deep and lasting impressions on his colleagues and clients. John's commitment to personal interests, dedication to family, and disciplined work ethic made him a role model for others.

PT&C's entire senior management team attended a dinner honoring Bob. Mr. Davis and James Rispoli, President and CEO, spoke about the company's desire to use the example of John Mandel to recognize and promote the values by which PT&C has operated for 29 years: Integrity; Respect, Consideration and Trust; Innovation and Calculated Risk; Teamwork; and Open, Direct Communication. Mr. Rispoli said, "These are not just corporate values, but important life values. I am proud to make this recognition an annual PT&C event."
